Incredible Health - 83/100

Recruitment marketplace for nurses

Round Size	$80 Million
Investment Series	Series B
Noted Investors	Andreessen Horowitz, Stardust Ventures, Kaiser Permanente
Location	San Francisco, CA
Total Raised	$97.275 Million

Job boards are classic examples of 2-sided marketplaces, and can be blitzscalers, but new entrants need to be able to answer the question "why is this superior to indeed, LinkedIn or Craig's List" (where most people are already looking for and posting jobs) and how can it overcome their powerful network effects to eke out a space of their own?

Incredible Health makes this argument by focusing on nursing, and can differentiate by addressing the unique aspects of this market. Strong networks of their own could develop on the platform if it becomes the place where most nurses seeking employment turn to, where job posters believe most nurses will be looking, and where a high level of differentiation and consideration exist between alternative offerings on both sides of the marketplace. The business is not inherently viral but there should be strong word of mouth within the nursing community. Gross margin, organizational and operational complexity suffer slightly from the need to onboard and handhold clients but remain manageable.

But the strong network effects inherent in a job board make it a blitzscaler.

Sphere - 79/100

Professional learning platform where experts create courses and find learners.

Round Size	$4 Million
Investment Series	Seed
Noted Investors	Felicis
Location	San Francisco, CA
Total Raised	$4 Million

Sphere is a professional learning platform where experts can record classes around their area of expertise and find learners. It shares a resemblance to Maven, but is more overtly focused on B2B partnerships and offers continuing professional development certification for many of its courses.

A virtual professional learning platform has the potential to bring together a strong network of experts and learners, and the cohort-based learning model increases the strength of the bonds that form among co-learners, who are more likely to spread the word to others within their professional circles, increasing the virality and stickiness of the resulting community. Cohort-based learning also exhibits higher rates of completion than MOOCs or other purely asynchronous offerings, which should make this an easier sell to B2B partners.

While these factors do contribute to network effects, the oversupply of experts within any field makes differentiation ultimately difficult at the aggregate platform level, without pursuing an unduly narrow vertical focus that would compromise market size. The reasonable rake of 20%, reliable and well-paying corporate audiences, plus support services for instructors, who retain full IP rights, should reduce the temptation for them to multiple-platform and encourage them to promote their own offerings on the platform, contributing to strong distribution.

Vetted - 75/100

Comparison search engine that helps users find the best products based on all available reviews

Round Size	$14 Million
Investment Series	Series A
Noted Investors	Insight Partners
Location	San Francisco, CA, USA
Total Raised	$14 Million

Consumers looking for a product search Google or Amazon, compare lists of items (increasingly stuffed with sponsored items), and sift for nuggets of relevant insight. It's always time-consuming, and often unsatisfying or futile. Vetted aims to offer a better alternative.

Vetted is a search engine for product reviews that spiders across the multitude of independent review sites and curates a list of product suggestions based on the best reviews, and also provides links to the products available for sale online at various locations. It's like Rotten Tomatoes for everything you ever wanted to buy.

Will this be WTM? Quickly? Ever? Hard to say. Viral growth will take time, as will acquiring customers. Merchants are unlikely to send shoppers there for fear that they will also find the same offering at a competitor, limiting network effects and that possible source of viral distribution. Users aren't that likely to share with others without some stronger reason or incentive not visible today. Product market fit might improve marginally over time, but that doesn't change the overall assessment. The business model is not yet entirely clear, either.

So, not a blitzscaler, but close enough to warrant mention and is a product we've tried and loved using.
