Wisestack- 82/100

Wisestack provides flexible payment for in-person services

| | |
|--------------------------|--|
| Round Size | $45 Million |
| Investment Series | Series B |
| Noted Investors | Bain, Greylock |
| Location | San Francisco, California, United States |
| Total Raised | $64 Million |

Wisestack brings flexible payment plans to plumbing bills. Or electrician bills. Or roofing, or hard cleanup, or moving... It is BNPL for services, and it's about time. Homeowners can get smacked with large bills out of the blue, and spreading out the payments would be extremely attractive to the millions who stretch to make their mortgage payments. Today, your choice is a HELOC or a credit card. One is too big, the other too expensive. Wisestack is "just right". So we like the product market fit, but what about the other factors? It sure feels like a land grab. Service providers are generally not tech savvy. So once they have a service that works, they are going to stick with it. For distribution, it's harder, but we think homeowners will tell service providers about it, and even select service providers who offer flexible payment once they get a taste of the convenience.

The global market is, of course, essentially unbounded. We expect global competitors will start popping up everywhere. Gross margins are a 10, and scalability nearly so, but there will be some customer service burden here that requires the human touch as they grow.

Overall and 82, but they need to go hard at this market before Square or Intuit brings their distribution might to the opportunity.

Welcome- 80/100

Welcome: Travel plans powered by friends & Artificial Intelligence.

| | |
|--------------------------|----------------------------------|
| Round Size | $3.5 Million |
| Investment Series | Seed |
| Noted Investors | Accel, Lakestar |
| Location | Venice, California, United State |
| Total Raised | $3.5 Million |

"When you are in Paris, you HAVE to go to this amazing historical map store we found..." - Good Friend

We have all had heard some form of the above, where you say you are going somewhere, and get a hot tip from someone you trust about what to do when there. It's usually a store, a place to eat, or an experience of some kind. These tips are pure travel gold, and Welcome wants to help us all mine that gold better by compiling all the "best of" information from your friends into a database of travel tips.

The cold start problem here, however, is massive. Which is why Welcome uses AI to create a simulated friend at first, to fill in until your real friends can contribute. But if they succeed, and build the definitive database of travel tips, then the upside is astounding because no product allows people to find the best activities tailored to their taste while in a new place. Yelp tried, and were on a good path, but they make money by promoting places that pay them the most instead of the best places, and their data is sparse outside the US.

Clearly this is a winner-take-most network effect market. For distribution, we don't see right away how this will be viral, and they will have to pay people to put information in at first.

Product market fit is a 7, as we don't trust the AI-powered initial experience. Gross Margins: 10
Org scalability: 7, they are relying on the street team to get their content.

It's an ambitious challenge, but a problem worth solving and if they prove it in LA, then this will be a real blitzscalier.

Fivable- 83/100

Fiveable is a social network platform for education that offers students learning through content, community, and courses.

| | |
|--------------------------|---|
| Round Size | $10 Million |
| Investment Series | Series A |
| Noted Investors | Progression Fund, Union Square Ventures |
| Location | Milwaukee, Wisconsin, United States |
| Total Raised | $15 Million |

The name "Fivable" makes no sense unless you know that getting a "5" on a high school AP (advanced placement) exam is really important in the US. Fivable wants students to network together in virtual study groups to increase preparedness for AP test. So it's a social network of high-achieving students.

If you have read past newsletters, you know that social networks score very high. Fivable has the potential to become the single destination for AP test prep. And it will be somewhat viral; once one student finds it useful they will tell their friends and will form groups together.

Unlike many social networks, however, this only appeals to a small sliver of the world's population. I am guessing that about 10% of US HS students take AP tests. There are only 4 years of high school, ~5 million students per year, which pencils out to 2M students total available market. Small numbers! The good news is that parents are used to paying a lot for test prep, so we can still score a 7/10.

Product market fit seems good, as are scalability, for a total score of 83. But the market size is a real question mark here, and something we would want to discuss with the company.

Higo- 89/100

Venmo for small and medium-sized businesses in Latin America.

| | |
|--------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| Round Size | $23 Million |
| Investment Series | Series A |
| Noted Investors | Accel |
| Location | Mexico City, Distrito Federal, Mexico |
| Total Raised | $26 Million |

Admit it. You regret missing investing in Venmo. It's an awesome business and will print money for decades. Well, perhaps Higo is the next opportunity. They want to be Venmo for small B2B payments.

Starting in Mexico with a Series A led by Accel, a mom-and-pop grocer might soon be paying a farmer with Higo for a recent produce delivery. 40 percent of the LatAm economy is small business, and there is not a lot of automation. So here is another fintech for LatAm that could follow in the footsteps of the likes of Nubank.

They get a strong 10/10 for winner take most. And a 10/10 for virality. Please don't make me explain why! Product market fit is a 7, as this is early, and there is a tech adoption hurdle here that we can't fully understand from afar. Market size is a 9, but could go up to 10 depending on how realistic international expansion is. Gross margins is 10, as this is a take-rate business model. We only allow a 6/10 for organizational scalability as businesses need a high level of service from their money handlers. But ops scalability is a 10. Final score is a very high 89. Higo is very much a company we should learn more about!
